An insight into Edexpro

About us

Edexpro is an online solution designed to revolutionise how organisations recruit, and students find new opportunities within their chosen industry.

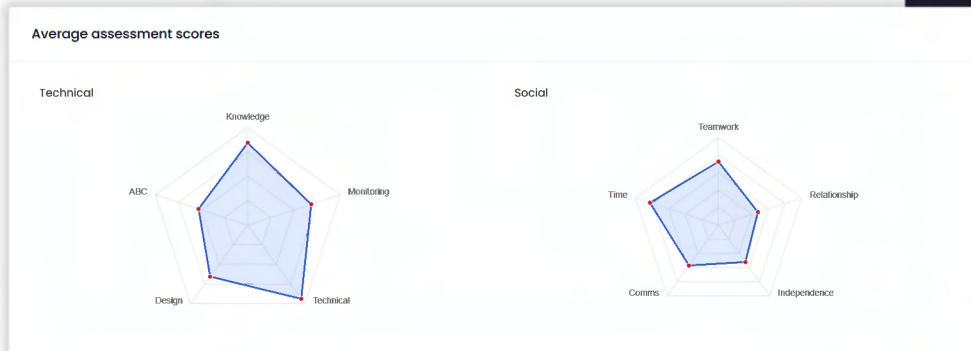

The student experience, insight and opportunities are at the forefront of every decision we make.

Joining Edexpro will put you in front of Elite, International and grassroots companies in different sports.

Profile page

Edexpro is an interactive solution that starts with your profile. Your bio will set the scene, you will do a piece to camera explaining your goals and aspirations, what roles you are looking for, courses you are studying and what experience and qualifications you have. This is your opportunity to sell yourself to prospective employers.

The graph highlights your technical and social skillset, every time you do a placement industry will assess you on these skills, the more placements you do, the higher your score will be and the higher you will list in relevant industry searches.

Applying for opportunities

Every opportunity will have your compatibility rating against it so you can see what jobs fit your current skill set and qualifications. Once you find a position that you are compatible with or interested in, you can apply. You can also change the filters and keywords to find different opportunities.

You can apply for any position that you feel will help you gain more experience and ultimately make you more valuable to a potential employer

Tracking opportunities

In your profile under the job application section, you will see the positions you have applied for. It will show your application status and overall job status. You need to know where you stand with every opportunity so you can accept or search for the next

How industries see you

Companies will see every person who has applied for a position and what their compatibility rating is, they can click on your profile to watch your bio, video links and read through your experiences. Companies will connect with individuals who meet their criteria, but also individuals who's profile catches their attention. If they want to search again, they can change the filters to populate more candidates.

Insight from industry

Make sure you do your homework and be prepared to do long unsociable hours, but it is very rewarding.

Immerse yourself in the opportunities out there, clubs up and down the country of all levels will be willing to take students on a shadowing or work placement basis so try and grab as many of these opportunities as you can.

Use social media to build your contacts, to access free learning materials, courses and podcasts.

Jessica Shaw

Head of Academy Sports Science and Medicine at Rotherham United FC

The best advice would be to be proactive, get as much experience as you can. Most importantly working with coaches and players it doesn't matter what level, the ability to build relationships with them is a key part of our roles. If you can get your hands on using different analysis softwares and cameras this can only help in developing your skills as an analyst.

Natasha Patel

Head of Performance Analysis - New York Red Bulls

My advice would be to develop an area of expertise so that you can add value to any recruitment team within a club.

You might have a good playing background, knowledge of the game or have very good knowledge of a particular league as this could add additional value to a recruitment team.

Actively keep developing your network within your chosen sport or in sport in general, do some work as a volunteer before you start trying to work in a part-time capacity.

Prepare yourself as you start your scouting pathway that it will probably be alongside your full-time job.

Wesley Awad

Head of Youth Development Phase Recruitment - Crystal Palace FC.
